

Year 8 Geography Fieldwork in Herne Bay, Kent (May)

This year in the Geography Department, after a 2 year gap, we have seen many of our normal field trips back on the school's calendar. As well as the annual visit for Year 7s to Rochester – a visit that has been going for more than 30 years – the Year 8 trip to Herne Bay to investigate coastal processes and management saw a welcome return.

The photos seen here were taken on the day where the weather was beautifully sunny (and I got the sun burn to prove it). The visit on the other day, with the other half of the year group, saw the worst day of rain (on a school fieldtrip) that I think I have ever seen!

Regardless of the weather, these fieldwork opportunities are an essential part of our learning in geography as well as developing vital skills and an awareness of the world beyond the classroom and London.

The support of parents is much appreciated.
